BUMBLEBAGS BREAKS NEW GROUND AS IT LAUNCHES RANGE OF PARTY BAGS THE LIKE OF WHICH HAS NEVER BEEN SEEN BEFORE: think dino poo and fairy dust!! Bumblebags today launches a groundbreaking range of filled party bags the like of which has never been seen before.

Out of the window go the disposable plastic 'tat' and even the rather in vogue wooden yo-yos. At bumblebags you get dinosaur poo and fairy dust!

Launching with a range of classically-themed filled party bags (dinosaur, pirate, knight, fairy princess, mermaid, ballerina etc) the company has used every opportunity to ensure their bags are fun, pink and fluffy, as blue as blue can be, but also, wherever possible, educational.

This has meant sourcing and creating products never before seen in children's party bags. Dinosaur bags, for example, can include genuine 70 million years old fossilised dinosaur egg shell.... or even dinosaur poo (yep dino poo!). These products have been sourced by bumblebags and then packaged to appeal to children - rather than boring, the accompanying information cards are fascinating. In fact they almost guarantee that the child will want to learn more on the subject.

bumblebags has developed its own range of gorgeous fabric party bags to house the fantastic products. Ethically made by a charity in India, they will be used again and again by their lucky recipients - creating constant reminders of the party. Their ballerina party bag has even been designed to be re-used as a ballet shoe/kit bag.

Do they come cheap? They are in fact extraordinary value for money with prices starting from £4.95 - a small price to pay for the fantastic products and of course the fact that all the hard work is done for you - no frantic traipsing around the shops is required (not that many of their products are available on the high street in any event).

A survey by Tesco's last year identified the average spend on a children's party bag to be £7.48. At bumblebags a dinosaur bag with fossil, fantastic quality plush dinosaur finger puppet, great model dinosaur and a giant punch balloon can be yours for just £5.95 - and that includes the fantastic fabric bag screenprinted with either a cute or scary dinosaur.
